Revised guidelines: thromboembolic disease in pregnancy

The Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists has published two new revised guidelines on preventing and treating venous thromboembolism (VTE) during pregnancy, birth and following delivery:

- Thrombosis and Embolism during Pregnancy and the Puerperium, Reducing the Risk \(Green-top Guideline No. 37a\). The aim of this guideline is to provide advice, based on clinical evidence where available, regarding the prevention of venous thromboembolism (VTE) during pregnancy, birth and following delivery.

Thrombosis and Embolism during Pregnancy and the Puerperium, the Acute Management of \(Green-top Guideline No. 37b\). The aim of this guideline is to provide information, based on clinical evidence where available, regarding the immediate investigation and management of women in whom venous thromboembolism is suspected during pregnancy or the puerperium.

NHS Citizen design

In 2013 the NHS Citizen project team was commissioned to develop a blueprint for how citizens can play a more active role in NHS England's decision making future. As a result the team has produced the NHS Citizen design. The design consists of two main parts: tools and processes to give citizens a more powerful voice in NHS decision-making and enable citizens to hold the board of NHS England to account; and an investigation of what this means both for the NHS and for citizens.

Relationship between psychosocial risk factors and health outcomes of chronic diseases

The World Health Organisation has published The relationship between psychosocial risk factors and health outcomes of chronic diseases: a review of the evidence for cancer and cardiovascular diseases \(2015\). This report summarizes the best available evidence for a link between psychosocial factors and morbidity and mortality from cardiovascular diseases and cancer in the WHO European Region. The evidence suggests that multiple adverse psychosocial factors are independently associated with a range of chronic diseases throughout adulthood.

Tobacco return on investment tool

As part of its savings and productivity collection, NICE has published Tobacco return on investment tool. The tool has been developed to help decision making in tobacco control at local and sub-national levels. It evaluates a portfolio of tobacco control interventions and models the economic returns that can be expected in different payback timescales. Different interventions, including pharmacotherapies and support and advice, can be mixed and matched to see which intervention portfolio or package provides the best 'value for money', compared with 'no-services' or any other specified package.

Asset-based approaches in health care

The Health Foundation has published Head, hands and heart: asset-based approaches in health care. This report summarises the theory and evidence behind asset-based approaches in health care and wellbeing and gives details of six case studies, describing these approaches in action. The aim of the report is to engage people in health care that are looking to introduce asset-based working into mainstream health and care sectors while also challenging current practitioners in community development to look at the dimensions and benefits of developing assets for improving community health and wellbeing.

Living well for longer

The Department of Health has published Living well for longer: progress 1 year on. It sets out progress in 2014 to 2015 towards reducing levels of premature avoidable mortality. The document illustrates progress against the actions set out in Living Well for Longer: National support for local action which followed a call to action from the Secretary of State for Health. It shows that there has been improved prevention, early diagnosis and treatment of the 5 big killers: cancer; stroke; heart disease; lung disease; and liver disease. The report outlines the next steps for ongoing improvements across the system in reducing premature mortality.

Delivering effective treatment to people affected by drug and alcohol

NHS Confederation has published a case study Delivering effective treatment to people affected by drug and alcohol misuse in Thanet. The case study describes out a programme of proactive cooperation between Turning Point and other organisations working in the local area. Turning Point's strategy is to focus on the specific challenges faced by each individual, including their family and household circumstances in conjunction with several organisations, including local NHS services, the probation service, housing officers, the police, JobCentre Plus, community mental health services, homeless projects, the carer support group, the local hospital, and staff at the council's gateway centre. Turning Point shares information, trains staff to refer clients to them, places outreach workers in their premises and attend meetings both bilaterally, and as part of the local authority's Margate Task Force anti-poverty group.

Improved CCG GP2GP utilisation report

A new utilisation report is available to CCGs aimed at helping identify barriers to using GP2GP. The GP2GP team produce a monthly CCG GP2GP utilisation report showing all practices within England (live and not live with GP2GP) and detailed information to enable CCGs (and where designated, CSUs), to fully understand the utilisation of GP2GP within each region. Guidance and frequently asked questions are included in the report to help users better understand common queries, possible issues and scenarios. This report includes full details of each practice's GP2GP requesting, sending and integration activity which should help identify potential barriers to using GP2GP. The new report will be emailed between the 10th and 15th of every month to subscribers.
